COUNTY CHARTER TO BE EXPLAINED BY J. B. HOWELL

November 2 is an important date to citizens of Daly City and vicinity.

On that evening, James B. Howell, former president of the board of freeholders, and now chairman of the Citizens' Charter Committee, will address a public meeting at the Daly City Hall, to fully explain the provisions of the proposed charter for the county of San Mateo.

For the past 64 years San Mateo county has been operated under an archaic, cumbersome and expensive form of government, it is claimed. The citizens of San Mateo county have no definite control of their county governmental affairs.

The State Legislature determines, not only the structural form of county government under which we should function, but they dictate the salaries we shall pay our public officials and the number of deputies they shall have, together with their salaries.

Despite the fact that San Mateo county was the second fastest growing county in the state of California, the county is operated under the same system of county government as other counties in the state who are not faced with this impending development.

Although San Mateo county has a population of 77,00 people, they are compelled to function with the same system of county government as Alpine county with a population of 271.

This form of county government is imperative because the state constitution specifies that the State Legislature shall create a system of county government which shall be uniform throughout the state.

We, in San Mateo county, together with fifty-two other counties in the state of California, have absolutely no control over our county governmental affairs. We are the victims of the constitutional restrictions imposed by the state of California.

In 1911 the constitution of the state of California was amended so as to permit the respective counties of this state to inaugurate a type of county government that would be in keeping with the development and growth of the respective counties.

San Mateo county, togther with many other counties of the state, has been advocating an improvement in their county government in order that they may establish home rule and to cope with the impending development.

The citizens of San Mateo county last October—more than a year ago—inaugurated a movement for the creation of a county charter form of government for San Mateo county. This movement met with success in all sections of San Mateo county, resulting in the election of a board of freeholders to draft and propose a county charter for San Mateo county. This has been done.

The proposed county charter for San Mateo county will be submitted for approval by the electorate of the county at the general election to be held in November.

The approval of this proposed county charter by the voters of San Mateo county not only means the establishment of a home rule in our government, but means the promotion and effectuation of an economical, efficient and practical form of government.

The proposed county charter for San Mateo county offers the following economic advantages:

1. The consolidation of the existing five road districts into a single unit in order that the county roads will be constructed when and where they are needed without consideration to political boundary lines.

2. The centralization of responsibility through the county executive under an appointment for a four year term by the board of supervisors, and who may be removed by a single violation of the proposed charter or by a four-fifths vote of the board of supervisors.

3. The centralization of administration of the charity and health features of the county. At the present time there is no coordinated efforts made by the health and charity function of our county government. They operate, dependent on the other, yet independent upon the other's function. Charity in county government is an important factor corelated with health and hospitalization functions. Yet, we in San Mateo county must function under the system as directed by the State Legislature in Sacramento. The proposed county charter efficiently arranges for the centralization of responsibility of all health, hospitalization and charitable functions of our county government. This particular centralization of responsibility in our health and welfare county functions has been endorsed by the San Mateo Medical Society. This endorsement undoubtedly speaks for the efficient, economical and practical arrangement of the charity and welfare functions in the charter.

4. The centralization of all purchase of all departments and offices in the county through the purchasing agent. Under the present system of county government many departments, and particularly the board of supervisors, are permitted to purchase equipment and supplies at their own accord without a requisition going through the office of a purchasing agent. This is a striking example in increased costs of governmental affairs. The proposed county charter makes it mandatory that all purchases of every department of our county government shall be made through our county purchasing agent.

5. The proposed county charter eliminates the obsolete fee system of county government. The county charter takes away all fees paid to public officials legally, and makes it mandatory that such fees shall be turned into the county treasury, in order that our county shall be the beneficiary of the work and effort devoted by the county officials. This means that the constables, the public administrator, the coroner, the district attorney under services in the capacity of attorney for the public administrator, shall turn all special fees into the county treasury and receive in full their compensation for services rendered.

To summarize, the advantages of the proposed county charter means the elimination of political road districts, the centralization of governmental responsibilities, the coordination of the health and charitable functions in order to promote economy, the elimination of the obsolete and costly fee system of county government and obliteration of the duplication of purchases through the respective departments of the county government.

The adoption of the county charter means not only the establishment of home rule county government, but the creation of an economic, efficient and practical form of county government to substitute the archaic system that now exists.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

The Crocker Glee Club took part in the P. T. A. program at the Crocker P. T. A. club rooms on October 11. Among the numbers rendered were "The Lord is My Shepherd," "A Brown Bird Singing," and Sing, Little Banjo, Sing." These are all two part numbers. They were so well done that the P. T. A. wishes to enter them in a county P. T. A. program in the near future.

Crocker now boasts a ukelele club. This club, under the direction of Miss Mosconi, meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays at recess. There are about twelve girls at present who are members of the club. Already the girls sing and play such songs as "Hawaiian Boat Song," "Song of the Islands," and "Neapolitan Nights."

The speed ball game between Woodrow Wilson and Crocker rolled up the largest score of the season, 1 to 4, in favor of Woodrow Wilson.

The plays worthy of mention were made by Henry Telleria, who kicked six goals, making 18 points, Lloyd Selmi, who made two field goals, Archie Biazzi and Earl Bobbitt, who each made three points by kicking goals, and Natchie Mendola, who kicked the only penalty kick. The game wes refereed by Harold Leggett.

The girls' volley ball game played on the same day was between the A and B teams of Woodrow Wilson and Crocker. Three games had to be played by the A teams before a decision was made in favor of Woodrow Wilson. The scores were as follows: First game, Woodrow Wilson, 15; Crocker, 10; Second game, Woodrow Wilson, 8; Crocker 15; Third game, Woodrow Wilson, 15, Crocker, 11.

Two games by the B teams were played and Woodrow Wilson won both games, 15 to 2 and 15 to 6. Mary McLean did some splendid playing for Woodrow Wilson A team.

ENJOYABLE BIRTHDAY DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. McKeown, of Los Olivos avenue, entertained at a dinner in their home last Friday in honor of their daughter, Miss Susie, who celebrated her twenty-first birthday on that day. The table was artistically decorated, the color scheme being carried out in pink and white. Among the guests who enjoyed this delightful affair were Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Berrigan, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Oakley, Francis Lynch, Hal Moral, Henry Puget, Harry Jacobsen, George Hopman, Laurence Kennedy, Mrs. Anna Hopman, Misses Itá and Veronica Berrigan, Miss Cecelia Nelson, Misses Etta and Catherine McKeown and Master Loughlin McKeown.

EAGLES DEFEATED IN PITCHING DUEL

The Daly City Eagles' baseball team went down to defeat last Sunday at the hands of the Fillmore Merchants. The contest resulted in a pitching duel between Davies for the Eagles and Snyder for the Fillmore boys. It was a tough game for Davies to lose, poor support being responsible for his defeat, as he kept the hits well scattered. Snyder also pitched a great game, though the Eagles were hitting his offerings only to have some Fillmore outfielders make some sensational catches.

Maloney played his usual great game, besides getting two hits. For the Fillmore boys, Tremaine led with two hits. Each side scored but one earned run. Davies struck out six batters, while Snyder whiffed two.

This coming Sunday the Eagles will play at Father Crowley playgrounds, at Seventh and Harrison street, at 2 P. M., with the Mission Reds as the opposition.

REPUBLICAN SERVICE LEAGUE IS ACTIVE

The Republican Service League of Daly City met last Tuesday at their regular meeting place, 6055 Mission street, all officers and members being present. Chairman Eugene Norton, of Winchester street, presided, and gave a most interesting talk, and many important details of the Hoover campaign in Daly City were discussed.

It was decided that a public meeting will be held on the evening of November 3, at 6055 Mission street, Daly City, at 8 o'clock. Among the speakers at this meeting will be Mr. Alexander Orr, resident of Daly City. Hon. George Hatfield, United States District Attorney, and Frank C. Tracey, former Surveyor of Port, are expected to be present.

A special invitation to attend this meeting is extended to all voters of Daly City.

Further Rail Relief Asked

An extension of the present relief measures for railroads over the next year was advocated Wednesday by the railroad securities committee of the Investment Bankers' Association, in convention at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia.

PUT NATIVE BRED HORSES ON BLOCK

When Native Daughter, shapely daughter of the blue blooded parents from Heather Farm, bounded down first to the imaginary wire at Tanforan on Monday, the thought ran through the head of more than one beholder to the triumph:

"Is it not about time for Mr. Marchbank to have another sale of fillies and colts from Heather Farm?"

For the vendues to come from Heather Farm in the last few years have attracted the widest of interest, not only among the cognoscenti of the great game, but the casual racegoers, who may, at some time or other, purchase a thoroughbred or two.

It is nothing more than the thing to be expected that the master of Heather Farm should dispose of runners, from season to season, in order that owners of strings and people planning to go into the breeding business, should have the opportunity to buy promising material.

This season the sale is coming next Saturday, October twenty-ninth, and more than twenty yearlings, two year olds, and three year olds will be put on the "block." For a spell, the Heather Farm "boss" is to devote his entire atention to breeding of thoroughbreds. The call of the turf will be too strong to resist in a year or two, in all probability, so that the familiar green and white, with the heather on the blouse, will be seen once more in lively tilts on the large tracks of the country.

Davil J. Davis, owner of Phar Lap; C. T. Boots, George Van Gorden, and other friends of John Marchbank were at Heather Farm last Sundey to witness the trials of the yearlings. To say that the men—every one an expert on blood lines and conformation—enthused over the babies would be putting it very mildly. Each of the visitors had his "pick," of course, in the band, but admiration was pretty well distributed among the eight coming two year olds.

The colts, geldings, and fillies can run—there is no doubt of that. By the successful stallions, War Cry and King Heather, the youngsters cannot miss, the discriminating say, when sent out under colors.

Horses in training to be disposed of include stakes winners and victors in feature events on important tracks, East, West and North.

STUDENTS' THEATRE PARTY SCHEDULED FOR NOVEMBER 3

Manager Covel of the Daly City Theatre announces all preparations have been made for record breaking crowds at each performance on November 3, the date of the annual theatre party of the students of Jefferson Union high school. The feature picture will be quite appropriate for the occasion, "Tom Brown of Culver," while there will be vaudeville acts and special stunts that should make an excellent program of entertainment.

Trade Activity Gains in Month

Both manufacturing and trade activity in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District increased moderately during September in contrast with a downward movement in the corresponding months of 1930 and 1931, according to the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Board.

DALY CITY GRID TEAM WINS, 7–6

Displaying a greatly improved offense, coupled with a fighting defense, the Daly City Cavaliers football eleven edged out a 7 to 6 victory over the Sunset grid outfit last Sunday at Park stadium. Having won their scheduled game by forfeit, the Cavaliers met the Sunset eleven in a practice tilt.

Featuring stellar work by Hughie Smith, playing his first game at right halfback gith the locals, the Daly City team had the Sunset players backed up in their own territory for the greater part of the game.

In the first quarter a quick kick by Smith rolled sixty yards and out of bounds on the Sunset five yard line to give the Cavaliers their scoring opportunity. On the next play, the Sunset team passed, Herman Kalinen intercepting the ball and dashing 26 yards to score. A pass, Smith to Kalinen, was good for the conversion.

The Sunset team scored when Guerrero, Daly City tackle, threw a high lateral pass, which bounded off Kalinen's finger-tips and into the arms of a Sunset halfback, who got away for 35 yards and a touchdown. The conversion failed.

The whole Cavalier team clicked well as a unit, McKee and Welsh starring in the line, while Smith and Kalinen were backfield luminaries.

Next Sunday the Cavaliers play their last game in the Stroud-Seabrook football league, when they meet the strong San Francisco Boys' Club at 10 o'clock on the Park Stadium field.

El Portal Social Club Discusses Live Issues

Last Friday night the El Portal Social Club of Daly City held another enthusiastic meeting at 101 Santa Cruz avenue. The meeting was well attended and good fellowship and good will was the spirit which prevailed throughout the evening. Personal interest was forgotten for public good, and the question of providing a playground for the youth of Daly City was favorably discussed, of which we shall hear more in the future.

Following the same trend of thought the initiative genius of a prominent member brought forth a project for the establishment of a picnic ground in the vicinity of one of the Crystal Springs lakes, close to Daly City, one that might be jointly used by the people of San Francisco and San Mateo counties, with little or no expense to Daly City; a place for recreation and outing on Sundays and holidays. And in this connection it was pointed out that one may drive for miles down the peninsula without finding a suitable place to stop and enjoy the pleasures of the open country.

Mayor H. H. Smith reported the receipt of a letter from the State Highway Commission, informing him that all moneys appropriated by the Federal government for the improvement of highways in California had already been allocated to other projects. The Mayor will not take no for an answer in this matter, but will proceed with other public officials to the state capital, in the hope of yet inducing the Highway Commission to spend some of that money in the proposed widening of Mission street, thus making it possible to do much of the work by day labor, and thereby greatly relieving unemployment in Daly City. Almost every public spirited organization in Daly City has by resolution petitioned the Highway Commission for this appropriation.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted and a copy ordered sent to the Daly City Council and another copy to Supervisor-elect Albert Witt:

Whereas, the fundamental purpose of this organization is to work for the best interests and welfare of the people of this community and for the general betterment and development of our city and county; and

Whereas, it is our desire to cooperate with our public officials to the end that our government may be most efficiently and economically administered; and

Whereas, it is our belief that much good will come from a closer acquaintanceship between the members of this organization and the public officials in that it will effect a better understanding and more harmony between these officials and the people; and

Whereas, many problems of government, such as the proper expenditure of the $350,000 proposed to be voted for the relief of unemployment in San Mateo county, the carrying out of the plans for the Mission street widening in Daly City, and the provision of work for our hundreds of unemployed, can be best solved when harmony and co-operation exist between the people and their officials;

Now, therefore, it is hereby resolved that this organization, with the above-mentioned purposes and aims in mind, and a spirit of helpfulness and friendly co-operation, extend to the newly-elected Supervisor of the First Township, Mr. Albert J. Witt, and to the members of the Daly City Council, an invitation to attend the next regular meeting of this association, to be held on Friday evening, November 18, at 101 Santa Cruz avenue, Daly City; and

It is Further Resolved that a committee of three be appointed to wait on the above-named officials and to personally extend to them a cordial invitation to be with us on that occasion; and

It is Further Resolved that copies of these resolutions be sent to Mr. Witt and the City Council of Daly City.

BOARD REQUESTED TO CALL COUNTY CHARTER MEETING

On Monday evening, October 24, there was a regular meeting of the City Council, all members being present and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

A communication was received from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, requesting permission to open a trench on the west side of Werner street, between Vale and School street, for the purpose of installing 51 feet of two-inch gas main as shown on the enclosed sketches. Permit was granted and the work will be under the supervision of the superintendent of streets.

A copy of resolutions passed by the El Portal Club at their last regular meeting was received by the board, expressing the desire of that organization to co-operate with the City Council and the newly elected Supervisor, Mr. Witt, to the end that our government may be efficiently and economically administered, and extending to Supervisor Witt and the members of the City Council an invitation to attend the club's next regular meeting, on Friday evening, November 18.

A communication was received from the Board of Freeholders, asking the Council to arrange for a meeting to be addressed by James B. Howell, president of the Board of Freeholders. The time set for this meeting was November 2, at 8 P. M., at the City Hall. All citizens are invited to attend.

The Fire Commission reported that the Fire Department was very active during fire prevention week, and recommended that a vote of thanks be sent to the department for their efforts and good work.

The monthly bills were read and ordered paid.

LEGION AUXILIARY MEMBERS MAKE PLANS FOR THE YEAR

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, held their regular meeting in Woodrow Wilson school, Mrs. Margaret Kenny presiding, and many plans were laid for the coming year.

On Thursday evening, October 13, the members held a card party at the "Red Cross Hut" at Letterman hospital. This party is a regular monthly event and is given for the amusement of the disabled veterans, who receive a great deal of enjoyment from this contact with the outside world.

On Sunday, October 23, the State Department of the American Legion Auxiliary held the annual school of instruction at the Whitcomb Hotel. Many interesting speakers were featured, and as it was the first opportunity that many units have had to meet the new department officers, it was well attended. Catherine Foreman, Margaret Kenney, Julia V. Jordan, June Craft, Hilda Prizborowski, and Grace Hill attended from Daly City unit.

The Second Area meeting was held at San Jose on Tuesday, October 25, with Elizabeth Edwards presiding and Lorena Good, California Department President, Ruth Mathebat, first vice-president, Ethel Flynn, state secretary-treasurer, and several state chairmen as guests of honor. Those who attended from Daly City were Margaret Kenny, Catherine Foreman, Julia V. Jordan and June Craft.

On Friday evening, November 18, Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, will hold a whist party in Woodrow Wilson school, at 8 o'clock. The proceeds of the whist will be used for the benefit of the veterans in Letterman hospital and the special Christmas fund for the veterans and their families.

Judge Buck's Long Service is Commended

Urging San Mateo county voters to retain their veteran Superior Court Judge, George H. Buck, non-political groups of citizens are citing his forty-two years of service as a jurist and his fine legal record as recognized by leading attorneys and judges of California.

In communications being sent San Mateo county citizens, voters are being reminded of the fact that Judge Buck has handled more litigation than any other four Superior Judges in all California, and that his standing in legal circles is one of the highest in the state.

Chief Justice William H. Waste, as chairman of the Judicial Council of California, is the authority for one of the testimonials in behalf of Superior Judge Buck.

Veteran of many a political campaign, Judge Buck is pointed out by his supporters as a public-office holder who has never indulged in political favor-seeking to retain his position.

"Acting strictly in accordance with his duties as an interpreter of the laws of his state and county, Judge Buck has never sought to strengthen himself in political ways by playing favorites," assert his supporters.

Such a judge should be retained in the interest of good government and impartial courts, add these citizen groups.

Judge Buck, following his practice of many years, is staging no money-spending campaign in an effort to ride into office. He is seeking re-election on his record, it is announced.

Another joke about two Irishmen: Callahan says to O'Farrell, "You're a fool." O'Farrell retorts, "You're drunk." Callahan admits the charge, saying: "Yes, but tomorrow I'll be sober and you'll still be a fool."

Catholic Daughters and Knights Sponsor Comedy

A comedy in two acts, "The Laughing Cure," preceding a social dance, will be given under the auspices of Court St. Mary No. 1155, Catholic Daughters of America, and Daly City Council No. 2712, Knights of Columbus, in the Jefferson Union high school auditorium, Saturday evening, November 12. Johnny Dell's band will furnish the music for the dance. Several noted radio artists have offered to render selections during the intermisison.

Rehearsals have been under way and much progress has been made, and everything points to an evening of much enjoyment to those fortunate enough to attend this affair. Mr. Andrew Irving, in taking the role of "Dr. St. George Carey" will quote his maxims for chasing the blues, worries and depressing spirits from our midst. He says, "I can always trust a man who dares to laugh. Laughter, pure and unadulterated, is bottled life; pull the cork and it efferveses. Laughing, in big doses, is the best beauty dope on the market."

Mr. Clement Ralph will portray the part of "Jimmie," a boyish, care-free boy of twenty, who is very susceptible to the girl element, and sentimentally inclined.

Mr. "Gene" Greene will adapt himself to the role of a physician of the old school, in upholding the "dignity of the profession."

Mr. Norbert Ralph will portray Clarke Hanson (would it were Clarke Gable), a man of business, useful, but not important.

Miss Marian Millett will star in the important role of Mrs. Hanson, with no sense of humor, but under the spell of Dr. St. George Carey, finds herself seeing the funny side of life.

Miss Celeste Altieri will enact the role of a tall, dark beauty, named "Gay," who lives up to her name of "G-a-y, Gay."

Mrs. Thomas Lowe takes the part of "Kitty," who has an eye for "Johnnie," and is somewhat apprehensive of Gay's friendship for him.

Miss Mae Eagan finds herself enrolled as "Mary Ellen" of the "Auntie Doleful" school, always carrying an air of gloom, a veritable death's-head throughout.

Last but not least, Miss Jean Egan fits perfectly into the role of "Norah," the maid. Her quaint "iOrrish" brogue will make many an Irish heart long for the "ould sod."

All in all, "a hundred laughs, one a minute," is the treat in store for all who will hie themselves to our beautiful high school auditorium on Saturday evening, November 12.

Cavaliers Hold First Basketball Practice

Having secured the Horace Mann gymnasium in which to practice, the Cavalier Club held its first basketball practice Tuesday evening.

An enthusiastic group of hoop stars filled the court, ready to fight for team positions. After a short warm-up period, three games were held, so that the best players could be sorted out.

The following are trying out for the team: Baird, Bertucci, Brush, Capps, Cleve, Diehl, Friend, Fulton, Grantham, Green, Kennedy, Martin, McKee, Scalia, Shaw, and Wilson.

Compared with Sayeda Amra of Cairo, Egypt, our American bigamists are mere pikers. Amra married 36 wives in 12 years, and wife No. 36 has had him arrested for forging divorce papers.

SPORTSMANSHIP OF JUDGE BUCK BRINGS PRAISE

Because he does not want the voters of San Mateo county to think he is using its power as Superior Judge to further his election on November 8, Superior Judge George H. Buck has announced that he will not call the Grand Jury until after election day, it was announced this week in Redwood City.

The Grand Jury will be called to investigate municipal conditions in San Bruno and South San Francisco.

Unless his colleague, Superior Judge Franklin Swart, wishes an immediate investigation, Judge Buck will delay the Grand Jury session until after the polls close.

The venerable county jurist left veteran politicians amazed, it was reported, when he failed to take advantage of an opportunity to gain county-wide publicity. Judge Buck was firm, however, Redwood City reports declare.

"For me to assemble the Grand Jury to investigate at this time alleged scandal in civic government would be unfair to the voters. I want San Mateo county voters to decide my cause at the polls uninfluenced by the wide-flung publicity that might result from a Grand Jury action.

"However, if my colleague, Judge Swart, thinks the immediate calling of the Grand Jury is necessary, I will concur," declared Judge Buck.

Judge Buck's attitude brought high praise from scores of civic organizations and private citizens.

HUNTINGTON BEACH CITIZENS FAVOR PROPOSITION NO. 11

"Tonight at the lagest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held in Huntington Beach, our citizens overwhelmingly adopted a resolution favoring Porposition Number 11, granting city tidelands rights as the only method of breaking the stranglehold of the oil monopoly, thereby reducing state and city taxes. In the name of right and justice, Huntington Beach asks YES vote on Nnmber Eleven.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

F. W. Hartford, publisher of the Portsmouth, N. H., Herald, says:

"The test of time has proven that nothing has been devised or executed in doors or out doors that can take the place of newspaper advertising. Newspaper advertising has made more successful merchants, industries, individuals in big and little businesses throughout the world than all other kinds of advertising combined. Newspaper advertising is a record and a permanent imprint upon the minds of the people. Every attempt to displace it has met with signal falure.

"Advertising over the air leaves no record. It fades almost instantly from the minds of the public. There is no check up. It fails to hold people. Circulation is occasional. Forced to take it in a mixed program is resented, while newspaper advertising is constant. It is there in the home for reference and for check up. It is not thrust at you. You buy it because you want it.

"In every community are patrons of the newspaper advertising columns. They may drift to test other means, but they are back with renewed activity to regain their position.

"Newspaper advertising is read by millions of men and women because they want to know. The great public institutions of the country have been made big through the use of newspaper advertising space."

TANFORAN MEET TO CONTINUE FOR WEEK

Racing at Tanforan will not end this week, in view of the fact that stable owners at the track have petitioned the management to continue racing at least another week. The petition presented by horsemen there asked that the meeting be extended, and as a result the Pacific Coast Breeders Association has agreed to prolong the meeting a week and maybe two.

In prolonging the meeting the Association announced that it would not interfere with other racing dates. It was pointed out that horsemen at the San Bruno oval are desirous of continuing until meetings are opened up in other sections.

Among the feature races tomorrow (Saturday) will be the Alameda County Handicap over a course of a mile and a quarter and to be run by two year olds bred in California. This race will bring to the fore outstanding horses of the Golden Gate state.

According to schedule there was to have been a farewell handicap tomorrow (Saturday), but in view of the extension of the meeting this race has been indefinitely postponed.

In postponing the closing date of the racing meet the Association issued the following statement: "The horsemen have requested that we continue our meeting for at least another week. It will not interfere with the racing dates of any other track, and we are glad to announce the continuance, because it will, as we have been informed, relieve San Mateo county's unemployment problem. If the horsemen are desirous of further continuance, it is quite likely that the Association will grant it."

It is expected that a record crowd will be on hand tomorrow (Saturday) to witness the Alameda County Handicap. Every facility for the handling of this crowd has been provided for at the track.

BRISBANE NEWS ITEMS

The Brisbane fire boys again had a record attendance at the Association meeting at San Bruno on Tuesday, October 18. Thirteen Brisbane firemen attended. The boys are progressing rapidly on the basement at the site of the fire hall to be built on Klamath.

"Dad and His Boy" was the topic of interest at the Brisbane P. T. A. meeting on Thursday, October 20. Mr. James Ferguson, of Jefferson Union high school was an interesting speaker. Miss Pansy Abbott gave encouragement on the work to be done on the Brisbane schools. The representatives of San Mateo county P. T. A. units were Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, president of the Seventeenth district P. T. A., Mrs. R. J. Spann, past President of the Seventeenth district, five members of Jefferson High, and eight members of Bay Shore. San Francisco units represented were Longfellow ten members, and one from Balboa High.

Mrs. Bessie Smolen of Chicago has suspicions that her husband is something of a four-flusher. Two years ago he left home saying he was going over Niagara Falls in a barrel. Mrs. Smolen has been watching the papers ever since for news of his feat, but in vain. Now she is tired of waiting and wants a divorce.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

R. A. Canine, Editor Daly City Record, Daly City, California.

I have been informed by one of my campaign representatives of your announced intention to fairly and impartially open your columns to material in behalf of my candidacy.

May I take this means of thanking you.

Your attitude, and that of several other San Mateo county editors who have also taken this stand, encourages me in my campaign.

During the many years I have served my community as a magistrate I have faithfully endeavored to administer justice in the best interests of my fellow citizens.

That the newspaper publishers of San Mateo county have shown such an impartial and fair attitude assues me that my record will meet with the approval of the voters, and that my years of public service will be given just consideration.

I have always endeavored to decide the rights of all litigants before me in accordance with the law as I believed it to be, and I can look back upon my judicial career of forty years with a quiet conscience and without judicial regrets.

Once again permit me to thank you for your kindness in offering the columns of your estimable paper to a fair and dispassionate statement of the matters connected with my campaign.

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed.) GEORGE H. BUCK,
Superior Court Judge.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Rolph Sets Plea Record

In setting a new record Governor Rolph has sent 144 prison clemency cases to the State Advisory Board for study during the first twenty months of his administration. The board announced that of the cases thus far decided, favorable recommendations have been made in 47 instances, with 57 unfavorable reports.

Restricted Vote Advocated

Rolland A. Vandegrift, State Director of Finance recently advocated the adoption of legislation that would permit only property owners to vote on bond issues secured by real estate. He stated that such a law has operated successfully in the state of Utah, and he believes it would work to the interest of California taxpayers.

Highway Obstacle Removed

Through a ruling of the State Supreme Court another obstacle blocking completion of the Golden State Highway was brushed aside. The Court decided against John W. and Margaret J. Young of Bakersfield in their fight against State acquisition of a strip of land 1.45 miles long to be used as a unit of the highway.

Rivalry for Trophy

The Better Citizenship Cup which will be awarded by the California State Chamber of Commerce to the community having the highest voting percentage at the November election has stirred keen rivalry among the communities throughout the State in the competition. Ramona, with a voting percentage of 97.8, won the cup in 1930.

I. O. O. F. Name Leaders

The following officers were named by the California I. O. O. F. at the annual encampment held in Modesto recently: Neil W. Reid, Santa Cruz, grand junior warden; F. J. Urich, Modesto, patriarch; W. B. De Costa, Sacramento, high priest; Robert Funk, Pomona, senior warden; M. H. Ludlow, san Francisco, scribe; J. I. Ralph, San Francisco, treasurer.

District Tax Rate

Retaining the same rate as last year the board of directors of the South San Joaquin Irrigation District recently announced the rate for the present fiscal year at $7.00. Items making up the rate were fixed as follows: Interest on outstanding bonds, $3.49; warrant redemption, $1.00; power for pumps, 27 cents, and maintenance and operation, $2.24.

Grape Claim Plan Continued

Following a recent conference by shippers and rail officials in San Francisco California grope shippers were notified by eastern railroad executives that they will abide by their 1931 agreement, whereby shippers are allowed claims for shifted grape car damages at the Manhattan Terminal in New York City.

W. C. T. U. Select Officers

In their convention held in Fresno recently, the Women's Christian Temperance Union named the following officiers for the ensuing term: Mrs. Louise J. Taft of San Francisco, president; Mrs. Grace R. Finn, treasurer; Mrs. Edna S. Landis, recording secretary; Mrs. Elva Fosdick Secord, treasurer.

Hetch Hetchy Suit Filed

Threatening lengthy litigation to prevent San Francisco from making use of its $175,000,000 Hetch Hetchy reservoir project, the Vernalis Land company has filed a suit in the Superior Court at Stockton against the city of San Francisco, seeking to enjoin permanently the municipality from diverting water from the San Joaquin-Tuolumne watersheds.

Portuguese Union Elects

At the annual convention of the U.P.E., Portuguese Union of California, held in Santa Maria recently, Anthony J. Silva, of Oakland, was selected as supreme president, with Frank Freitas, San Jose, vice president; M. Fraga, San Leandro, secretary; Frank S. Roderick, Oakland, treasurer. J. J. Cardoso, Livington; J. A. Freitas, Oakland; M. Gaspar, Oakland, and A. Wilson, Stockton, are the new directors.

Bean Seed Selected

Three San Fernando Valley fields of Hopi lima beans of the variety known as No. 56 were accepted recently as a source of seed for next spring by a committee of bean growers appointed by the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau and the Lima Bean Growers' Association. The committee inspected a twenty-acre field belonging to Charles Walker at Reseda, a four-acre field belonging to James Andrews of North Los Angeles and sixteen acres belonging to Armacost & Royston of Chatsworth.

Warden Court Smith of Folsom prison was presented with a framed sheepskin recently, bearing the signatures of 2300 convicts, in appreciation of the treatment accorded them. Several hundred were unable to sign the testament due to lack of space.

City officials of Ontario and Upland are studying the posibility of establishing an electric light and power distribution system to be owned by the two municipalities, in an effort to lower taxes, and at the same time increase revenues for the two cities.

Fall Pea Crop Planted

The fall pea crop in the Calipatria section of the Imperial Valley is all planted and the spring crop will be put in the ground soon. Fall peas are a big item in this district, but the spring peas are confined to a smaller area north and east of Calipatria.

32,000 Realtors in State

A recent report issued by Joseph P. Smith, State real estate commissioner, shows that since January 1, 1932, his department has issued a total of 32,150 licenses. Of this total 15,505 were for brokers, 8951 went to regular salesmen, 4267 to temporary salesmen and 3427 were transferred licenses.

Delinquent Taxes

In the Los Angeles area tax delinquencies have grown at rather an alarming rate during the past five years, according to reports. On July 1, 1928, the county auditor had on his books for collection $5,577,923 in accumulated delinquencies; on July 1, 1932, he had $17,724,965.

Grapes Go To Far East

Among foreign destinations to which grapes were shipped from the Cutler district were, Honolulu, Java and Singapore. Domestic markets included Dallas, Texas; New York City, and San Francisco. Operations started late in July on white Malagas and Thompsons, with other varieties coming in later.

Saber Presented to State

A saber used by a famous Civil War general and his commission bearing the signature of Newton Booth, early-day governor, has become the property of the State, and placed among other war relics at Sacramento. The presentation was made to the State by Miss Marion Thompson, daughter of the late General Dewitt Clinton Thompson.

Library Building Planned

Plans to create a building fund for proposed future construction of a memorial library on the campus of Chaffey Union High School and junior college in Ontario got under way recently. According to a resolution adopted by the board of education the annual income of $6000 is to be set aside over a period of years to create the fund.

Birthrate Lags in State

Dr. Giles S. Porter, director of the State Department of Public Health announces that in the first six months of this year, there were 38,091 births, as compared with 40,255 in the same period last year, a decrease of 5½ per cent. Most of the decreases occurred in the larger centers of population. In the six months' period 19,409 of the births were boys and 18,682 were girls.

"Road Hog" Under Ban

"Your half of the road is not in the middle" is the phrase adopted by the California Committee on Public Safety in their drive this month against motorists who are inclined to "hog the road" by driving close to the center of the road or actually astriddle the center line of the highway. The danger, discourtesy and unlawfulness of the "road hog" habit of driving is the subject of the State-wide campaign.

Record Registration in L. A.

By far the largest registration in the history of Los Angeles county Registrar of Voters William M. Kerr announced an army of 1,242,855 voters have registered and will be eligible to vote in Los Angeles county at the Presidential election on November 8. The registration surpasses the total population of four Western states, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico and Wyoming, based on the 1930 census figures for these states.

Highway Projects Scheduled

With $4,700,000 provided by the federal emergency relief fund thirty-one State highway projects costing approximately $6,000,000 will be started this winter as a part of the State's regular devclopment program for the relief of unemployed. The remainder of the fund will be made up from the California gasoline tax monies, and all the projects, to be started in practically every county in the State, must be completed by June 30, 1933, to receive the federal aid. In addition, 85 per cent of the work completed must be done by hand labor, according to the report.

State's Assessed Value

According to Ray L. Riley, State Controller, the assessed value of all property in California is $8,498,447,651, with total county indebtedness listed as $209,725,819.26. The assessed value figures for the 1932 fiscal year included: Real estate, $3,265,550,724; improvements, $2,023,307,157; personal property, $749,543,070; money, $2,473,208; solvent credits, $411,439,873; stocks, bonds and notes, $710,098,960; value of non-operative property, $7,162,412,992; value of property assessed on operative roll, $1,061,737,772; total value of property as returned by county auditors, $8,224,150,764; value of railroads as assessed by State Board of Equalization, $274,296,887.

Lowest County Tax Rate

State Controller Ray L. Riley in his annual report on the value of taxable property in California counties showed tax rates as a whole increased, despite depressed business conditions. Los Angeles held the distinction of having the lowest tax rate for county purposes of any county in the state, with Del Norte second, followed by Kings and Orange counties. San Francisco county stood 47th among the 58 counties this year, with its tax rate of $3.96 per $100 for both inside incorperated cities and outside.

CHILDREN'S STORY

—By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT'S NEW HORNS

PETER RABBIT was puzzled. He stared at Lightfoot the Deer a wee bit suspiciously. Lightfoot had just shown Peter how very fierce he could appear when he wanted to, and now Peter had discovered what looked like bits of old fur hanging to Lightfoot's horns. "Have you been tearing somebody's coat?" he asked. He didn't like to think it of Lightfoot, of whom he always had thought as being quiet as gentle, harmless, and timid as himself. But what else could he think?

Lightfoot slowly shook his head. "No," said he, "I haven't torn anybody's coat."

"Then what are those rags hanging on your horns?" demanded Peter.

Lightfoot chuckled. "They are what is left of the coverings of my new horns," he explained.

"What's that? What do you mean by new horns?" Peter was sitting up very straight with his eyes fixed on Lightfoot's horns as if he never had seen horns before.

"Just what I said," retorted Lightfoot. "What do you think of them? I think they are the finest horns I've ever had. When I get the rest of those rags off they will be as handsome a set of horns as ever was grown in the Green Forest."

Lightfoot rubbed his horns against the trunk of a tree till some of the rags hanging to them dropped off.

Peter blinked very hard. He was trying to understand and he couldn't. Finally he said so. "What kind of a story are you trying to fill me up with?" he demanded indignantly. "Do you mean to tell me that those are not the horns that you have had as long as I've known you? How can anything hard like these horns grow? And if these are new ones, where are the old ones. The idea of trying to make me believe that horns grow just like plants. "I've seen Bossy the Cow all summer and I know she has got the same horns she had last summer. New horns indeed!"

"You are quiet right, Peter, quite right, about Bossy the Cow. She never has new horns, but that isn't any reason why I shouldn't, is it?" replied Lightfoot patiently. "Her horns are quite different from mine. I have a new pair every year. You haven't seen me all summer, have you, Peter?"

"No, I don't remember that I have," replied Peter, trying very hard to remember when he had last seen Lightfoot.

"I know you haven't," retorted Lightfoot. "I know it because I have been hiding in a place you never visit."

"What have you been hiding for?" demanded Peter.

"For my new horns to grow," replied Lightfoot. "When my new horns are growing I want to be away by myself. I don't like to be seen without horns or with half-grown ones. Besides, I am very uncomfortable while the new horns are growing and want to be alone."

Lightfoot spoke as if he really meant every word he said, but still Peter couldn't, he just couldn't believe that those wonderful great horns had grown out of Lightfoot's head in a single summer. "Where did you leave your old horns, and when did they come off?" he asked, and there was doubt in the very tone of his voice.

"What Have You Been Hiding For?" Demanded Peter.

"They dropped off very early last spring, but I don't remember just where," replied Lightfoot. "I was too glad to be rid of them to notice where they dropped. You see they were loose and uncomfortable and I hadn't any more use for them because I knew that my new ones would be bigger and better. I've got one more point on each than I had last year.

Lightfoot began once more to rub his horns against the tree to get off the queer rags hanging to them and to polish the points. Peter watched in silence for a few minutes. Then, all his suspicions returning, he said:

"But you haven't told me anything about those rags hanging to your horns."

"And you haven't believed what I have already told you," retorted Lightfoot. "I don't like telling things to people who won't believe."

Wolverine Tackle

Francis Wistert is considered about the best man at tackle on the University of Michigan team. Much is expected of him this season.

SHRIMPS AND SOUPS

THERE is not a more appetizing cocktail than one of shrimp. If the fresh ones are obtainable, they are far finer than the canned, though the canned ones are good. Prepare a snappy sauce of tomato catsup, chili sauce, and a few drops of tabasco and a nip of horseradish. Serve the shrimps in a cocktail glass, sauce, glass and shrimps all chilled.

Today one may purchase for a few cents any number of kinds of good soup. If one has a bit of stock which has been made of leftover meat, bones and gravy, add it to a can or two of the commercial stock, with such seasoning as one likes and you will have a different soup. A hot dish for the first course or following the cocktail, seems to be universally liked, for the millions of cans of soup sold daily in the markets are proof that it is popular.

One may, with the addition of minced cooked vegetables, convert a canned soup into one that is individual. A little rice, a little asparagus, a few spoonfuls of peas added to boulion or clear soups add to their attractiveness as well as flavor and nutriment.

Tomato soup is one of the canned soups that has a large repertoire as a food. It may be converted into a delicious meat or fish sauce in a turn of the hand. Poured over a meat loaf it transforms it into a delightful surprise. It may be added to the meat when making a loaf with the egg or cereal used as a binding omitted. Part of the soup is saved to serve as a sauce with the meat. More cayenne, a bit of onion juice, or garlic, a grating of nutmeg or of lemon peel, all adds variety to the tomato sauce.

One of the most delightful of rarebits is made with tomato and cheese. Use the canned tomato soup instead of the fruit, adding a beaten egg just before it is poured over the toasted bread or crackers.

THE BEAUTY OF A GRIN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I HAVE seen a lot of people who were homely, in a way;
Some were thin and some were portly, some you couldn't hardly say.
There was something wrong about them, as so frequently appears,
In the way their noses titled, in the angle of their ears.
But you suddenly forgot it, whether fat or whether thin—
For no face was ever homely when it started in to Grin.

Though they didn't have the beauty of Adonis and the rest,
They'd another sort of beauty that was brotherhood expressed.
For a lighthouse may be builded, builded nobly, builded right,
But to make the house a lighthouse it will have to show a light.
And you neighbor wants a neighbor, not a walking photograph;
They may talk about your beauty, but they want to see you Laugh.

For a fellow is a failure, with the features of a Greek,
If he hasn't any sunshine in his system, so to speak.
I have seen a lot of people who were homely, in a way,
But the world forgot about it when they passed the time of day.
I have seen a lot of features that were wrong about a mile,

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM

Among the numerous commissions, boards, committees and other advisory bodies created during the present depression with a view to devising means for economic betterment, none has a more distinguished personnel than the committee recently selected to study and make recommendations respecting the plight of the country's railroads. This committee is an unofficial body, formed on the initiative of important savings banks and insurance companies, whose holdings of railroad securities makes the soundness of these securities vital to the interests of their depositors and policyholders.

The committee is composed of former President Calvin Coolidge, chairman; Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York; Bernard M. Baruch, eminent financier; Alexander Legge, former chairman of the Federal Board, and Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution.

In a letter requesting these notable citizens to undertake the difficult task assigned them, the bankers and insurance companies said in part:

"The present position of the railroads is a matter of grave concern. This situation touches every citizen. We beg that you examine all phases of the problem and recommend a solution which, with due regard for public interest, will insure an opportunity for the railroads of this country to operate on a business basis."

Every thoughtful citizen must realize that the preservation of our incomparable railroad facilities is a matter of vital importance, not only to the many thousands of small railway stockholders, but to the other thousands of railway employees, and to millions of bank depositors and insurance policy-holders whose welfare is dependent upon the stability of our rail system.

The findings and recommendations of the Coolidge committee will, therefore, be awaited with unusual interest on the part of the public.

RELIEF BONDS, NUMBER 21 ON BALLOT, COUNTY NEED

On the long ballot that must be voted on November 8 are many propositions that allow of an honest difference of opinion. But on one issue there can be no doubt.

The Work Relief Bonds, Number 21 on the ballot, represent the difference between actual want and hunger for 6,000 bona fide residents of San Mateo county this winter, and at least the bare necessities of life for them.

No thinking voter should hesitate for a moment to vote this $350,000 issue. Even if the laws of humanity did not demand it, the laws of California specifically compel the counties to care for their own needy citizens.

Should the bond issue fail to carry the necessary two-thirds majority, it would be necessary to levy the whole amount on next year's tax rate. This would mean at least 70 cents on the hundred dollar valuation, and would be a severe blow at this time to many small taxpayers.

On the other hand, should the bonds carry successfully, no levy would be necessary until 1934 to pay for the bonds, and then only by light payments over a period of twenty years, in amounts that would not be felt.

This Relief Bond issue is a challenge to the community spirit of San Mateo county. A citizens' committee made up of the finest men in the community, headed by Sam D. Merk, is working for the passage of the bonds. Every voter should fall into line with their efforts, and give a decisive vote "YES" for the Work Relief Bonds, Number 21 on the ballot.

NEWS ITEMS OF 1776

Items from old newspapers are of interest to many, and here are a few from the Massachusetts Sun, published in Worcester on July 17, 1776, the front page of which was devoted to the Declaration of Independence, then less than two weeks old. A news letter from New York City read:

"On Wednesday last the Declaration of Independence was read at the head of each brigade of the Continental Army at or near New York, and everywhere received with loud huzzas and utmost demonstration of joy. The same evening the equestrian statue of George III was by the sons of freedom laid prostrate in the dirt. The lead wherewith this monument was made is to be run into bullets to assimilate with the brains of our adversaries, who, to gain a peppercorn, have lost an empire."

A resolution of the House of Representatives of Watertown requested that people of that colony donate their leaden window weights for the making of bullets.

Among the notices were one stating that there were "considerabe numbers of prisoners in town, who were willing to go out to service if proper persons should appear to hire them."

Delinquent subscribers were a problem in those days, as they have been ever since, it appears from a card from the publisher, who thanked those readers who paid up, adding: "He begs that such as have not paid him would be so considerate as to think of the great disadvantage it must be to him to have so many small sums in different hands, therefore would now request that they would pay their respective balances, which will greatly oblige their humble servant, Isaiah Thomas."

After 156 years, a good many publishers may still find Mr. Thomas' courteous suggestion quite applicable to present conditions.

FLYING TO MECCA

It is with something like a shock that the Christian world heard of the advent of the railroad into Jerusalem some years ago. Somehow it seemed almost like sacrilege to invade the Holy Land with such an innovation.

Now the Mohammedan world is about to experience a similar upset of its traditions. The airplane is to replace the camel as a means of transporting faithful pilgrims to Mecca.

A pilgrims' transport agency of British India is seeking a dozen airplanes to carry twenty or more persons each for the use of the pilgrims. Several ships are also desired for the sea portion of the journey, from India to the port of Jedda. Thence they desire to go by airplane to Mecca.

It would be interesting to know what Mohammed, himself once a camel driver, would think of the abandonment by pilgrims of that time-honored beast of burden for the modern airplane.

PAPER FROM ALASKA

For several years the enormously increased demand for paper of all kinds has given concern to many, who feared that with the depletion of the forests of Canada and the United States a paper famine might ensue.

This fear has led to the substitution with more or less success of other fibers instead of wood, as well as to efforts to make available new sources of wood pulp supply.

In the search for new timber the paper manufacturers have recently turned to Alaska, where immense forests of suitable woods have been discovered. Two of the largest timber sales ever made by the United States Forest Service were negotiated for Alaskan forests.

One involves the purchase of 835,000,000 cubic feet of pulp timber in the vicinity of Juneau, Alaska, the contract requiring the erection of a paper mill of 200 tons daily capacity, to be increased with 15 year to 400 tons.

The same interests are seeking water power sites in that region where tremendous potential water power exists. Recent surveys of Alaska by government aviators have revealed almost limitless natural resources, and it is likely that adventurous spirits of the future will there find a virgin field for their activities.

The Everlasting Whisper

FROM THE BEGINNING

Mark King, prospector, and his partner, Ben Gaynor, share with a desperado, Swen Brodie, knowledge of a vast store of hidden gold. King is impressed by Gloria, Gaynor's daughter. He dislikes a house visitor named Gratton. In a spirit of adventure Gloria accompanies Gratton from San Francisco on a "business" trip. At Coloma she finds her father badly hurt. He gives her a message for King. With Gratton, she goes to the Gaynor summer home, but realizes she has compromised herself by her journey with Gratton. He proposes marriage, and Gloria apparently accepts him. King watches the ceremony through a window. At the last moment the girl refuses to utter the requisite "yes." King enters and Gloria appeals to him for protection. Gratton dismissed, reveals knowledge of the hidden gold. King emboldened by Gloria's appeal to him, urges her to marry him. Really in love with him, and seeing a way out of her dilemma, the girl consents. Gaynor's message reveals the location of the treasure, and urges King to go at once and secure it. After the wedding, Gloria asserting the necessity for rest after her trying experience, King leaves her and prepares for his trip. Next morning Gloria insists on going with him. On the journey her overwrought nerves give way, and she admits to King that she married him only to "save her name from gossip." King, humiliated, renounces her but refuses to take her home, declaring he is under promise to her father to lose no time seeking the gold. She unable to find her way home alone, has to go with him. Gloria's horse goes lame, and has to be abandoned. King finds the gold. Gloria resents his giving her orders. King decides to start back and return with trusted men, but finds his horse has broken away. Their food is almost gone and King tells Gloria they must start home on foot, despite a raging storm. Gloria refuses to obey him or help him in any way, and in his despair he strikes her with a rope's end. Then he leaves her, bitterly regretting his action. Later, he decides he must, to save their lives, make his way out alone and send back a party for Gloria. He explains the situation, and leaves her. Alone, Gloria sees Gratton making a painful way through the storm.

"But it is so easy," she cried to him, forgetful of her own terror at mounting up here. "I have done it."

"I can't," he said miserably. "It was all I could do to get this far. I—I think I am dying—"

Again and again she pleaded with him. But he had either reached the limit of his physical endurance or, shaken and unnerved, he had not the courage to attempt the steep climb. He lay still; his eyes were shut, and to Gloria, too, came the swift fear that the man might be dying.

"I am coming to you!" she called.

She began making the hazardous descent. She did not take time to ask herself if she could make it; she knew only that she must. After a weary time she came to the base of the cliffs. Gratton was not a dozen paces from her. He did not move but looked at her in a strange, bewildered fashion. Seeing that he made no attempt to move, she made her way to him.

"It's you—Gloria Gaynor!" he muttered. "But I don't understand."

"I came with Mark King. The storm caught us. Just as it caught you. But you must come with me; if you lie here you will be chilled; you will freeze."

He shook his head. "I can't," he groaned. "I am more dead than alive, I tell you. I have been since before dawn getting here." He cast a bleak look up along the cliffs and shuddered. "I'd rather lie here and die than attempt it."

Once more Gloria was urging and pleading. But in the end she gave over hopelessly, seeing that Gratton would not budge. And it was so clear to her that he would perish if he lay here.

"There's a hole in the cliffs just yonder," Gratton said drearily. "I was going to crawl in there when you called."

Then Gloria saw for the first time the opening to that cave which in Gus Ingle's Bible had been set down as Caive number one. It was almost directly under King's cave, at the base of the cliffs.

"Come, then," she said. "Let's see if it's big enough for a shelter."

Gratton heaved himself up with a groan. Gloria did not wait for him, but began the tedious breaking of a path the few feet to the hole. She could see nothing; she heard nothing. Nothing save Gratton's hard breathing close behind her. She got a grip upon herself and made a step forward, paused, extended her arms to grope for a wall, and made another step. There was still no sound; she breathed more freely, assuring herself that save for herself the cavern was empty. She stumbled over a rock, stopped again and called to Gratton. Only now was he entering.

She struck a match carefully, cupped the tiny flame with her hands, and strove to [illegible] what lay about her. There was a litter of dead limbs about her feet. She began gathering up some of the smaller branches, groping for others as her match burned out. It was Gloria's hands which started the fire and placed the bits of dry wood upon it. The flames crackled; the wood caught like tinder; the flickering light retrieved much of the cavern about them from the utter dark.

"Here I stay," said Gratton. He dropped down and began warming his shaking hands. A more abjectly miserable specimen of humanity Gloria had never looked upon. He was jaded, spiritless, cowed.

But he was a human being, and she was no longer alone! She was lifted from despair to a realm bright with hope. King had gone for succor; she had a companion to share with her the dread hours of waiting. She caught up a burning brand as she had seen Mark King do, and holding it high made a quick survey, going timidly step by step further from the entrance, deeper into the cavern. It was much like the one so high above. Gratton could not, or would not, climb to the higher cave; then why should they not make this their shelter? She would have to climb the cliffs again; but she would have to do that in any case. Once up there it would be so simple a matter to toss down blankets and food and cooking utensils; a half-hour would see her camp moved from one cave to the other. Eager and excited, she began to tell Gratton what she meant to do.

"Wait a while," he urged her. "I am terribly shaken, Gloria."

Presently he said: "Do you think we are ever going to get out of this alive?"

"Yes." Her voice rang with assurance. "Mark King has gone for help. All we have to do is wait for a few days."

His pale brows flew up.

"King? He has gone? He has left you alone here?"

Again she said: "Yes." Gratton began plucking at his lip, striding up and down now. It became obvious to her that there had been nothing wrong within him beyond what his frantic terror had done to him. Perhaps, left alone, he would have died out there in the snow; now, having already leaned on her, having her company and the hope she held out, he began to look his old self.

"Now I'll go for the things in the other cave," she suggested. And as an afterthought: "Now that you are feeling better, perhaps you will go up with me and help?"

"You Beast!" She Panted. "You Cowardly, Contemptible Beast!"

"Why," he said, "Why—of course. Yes, we'll both go."

Having seen that she had done the thing with no mishap, he was willing to do what before he could not do.

"Come," he said. "Let's hurry."

They reached the upper cave. Her fire, though low, still burned. She put on more dry wood from the great heap King had left for her. She began to look about, planning swiftly just how easiest to move the few belongings which must go with her.

He came forward and stood warming his nervous hands at her fire.

"And you," he said, marveling, "you actually came with a man like King into a place like this!"

"I was a fool," cried Gloria. 'A pitiful little fool. Oh!"

"You found King wasn't your kind," he announced. "You have quarreled!"

"From the very beginning," she replied quickly. "He is unthinkable. Haven't I told you I was a fool? I didn't know then quite what men were . . . some men."

She was not measuring every word now. She meant simply that she was determined to have done with Mark King, holding bitterly that she would go to anyone to be definitely through with King.

His eyes followed her as she gathered up her few personal and intimate possessions, comb, brush, little silken things of pale pink and blue. A faint color seeped into his usually colorless lips. When she saw the look in his eyes, she stared at him wonderingly.

"What is it?" she asked, her voice puzzled. "What are you thinking?"

He shrugged. "I was just thinking how superb you are," he replied, not entirely untruthfully. For his ulterior thought had been reared upon the vital fact of her triumphant beauty.

"Gloria!" he said hoarsely, "you are wonderful! And you have come to me!"

Gloria met his rather too ardent admiration with that cool little laugh which had been her weapon in other days. She was not afraid of Gratton.

"I came to you," she said frankly, "because I was a woman in distress and had no alternative. You understand me, don't you?"

He hardly heard her. To his mind the situation was clearness itself. Gloria had come alone into the forest with Mark King. She had been with him all these days and nights. But she and King had quarreled; tired of each other already, perhaps. Gratton did not care what the reason was; he was gloatingly satisfied with the outcome. He had always coveted her.

He came a step closer and the firelight showed how the muscles of his throat were working. Gloria's eyes widened. But not yet did she fear.

"Mr. Gratton," she began.

"Gloria!" he cried out. "Gloria!"

His hands, suddenly flung out, were upon her. She tore them away, wrenched herself free from him, and started back.

"Oh!" she cried, shrinking not so much from him as from the thing she read so plainly at last. "Surely, you do not think . . . you misinterpret. . . . my being here at all, my being with Mr. King. . . ."

"No," cried Gratton wildly. "I misinterpret nothing. You gave yourself to him: you saw your mistake; you hated him. You have come to me. I have always loved you; I want you."

Her cheeks flamed red with hot anger. She drew back from him. He followed, his arms out. She was amazed, for the moment shocked into consternation. Then she marked the small stature, little taller, little stronger, than her own; the pale face, the narrow chest, the slender body.

"You know what I mean, what I want," he was muttering. "That sweet young-thing innocence is all right in its place but that place is not here alone in the mountains with a man."

"Man!" she burst out scathingly. "You, a man! Why, you wretched little beast!"

But Gratton, his brain reeling with hot fancy, came on. His arms groped for her. Gloria swept up a dead pine limb that lay by the fire and swung it in both hands and struck him full across the face. He reeled back, his hands to his face.

"You beast!" she panted. "You cowardly, contemptible beast."

His mouth was bleeding. And she read in the gesture and in the man's whole cringing attitude that danger of any physical violence from him was past and done with.

An absolutely new sense of elation sang through Gloria's blood. She was fully mistress of the situation, and had found within her an unguessed strength.

"Mr. Gratton," she said swiftly, "you have made a mistake. Mr. King has never offered me violence of that sort. Remember that, though we are alone and in the mountains, I am the same Gloria Gaynor that you have known. And be sure that you treat me as such."

He nursed his battered lips and stared at her. The blow had dazed him. The stick was still in her hands; a shiver ran through him. His desire went out of him.

"I wish to God I had never seen you," he groaned.

She had meant from the first to take the upper hand. Now she was almost glad that this had happened. For now she was very sure of herself. She dropped the stick and wiped her hands.

"We have other things to think of," she said. She began dragging the blankets from her bed, tumbling them to the floor. "Take these," she commanded.

"I was a fool for ever leaving San Francisco," he muttered bitterly. "You let me think that you cared for me, and now you treat me like a dog. I spent time and money trying to be the one to find gold in these infernal mountains."

Gold! He stopped at his own word, his eyes flying wide open. During these later hours, fleeing from Brodie's men, stumbling upon Gloria, swirled away by mad longings, he had not thought of gold. But here was King's camp; straight here had King come after Gloria had brought him her father's message and old Honeycutt's secret. Then the gold was here! He began looking about him eagerly. King was gone? Then not for men to bring help to Gloria but to aid him in carrying off the gold. He began questing feverishly, shuffling about in the shadows while Gloria, busy with her plans for moving, wondered at him. Presently, he came upon the bag which King had meant to take out with him that day the horse was lost.

He went down on his knees by the sack, got a heavy lump in his hands, rubbed at it, and finally sat back, staring up at her with new flames of another sort leaping in his eyes.

"It's next thing to solid gold!" he gasped. "There are thousands—thousands— Millions!"

It struck Gloria that there was small justice in Gratton reaping any reward, having done nothing to earn it. "We have the things to move. Come, hurry."

"Why should we move, after all?" he demanded sharply. "Now that I have got up here, why not stay? King would know where to send for us, and —and those cursed dogs of Brodie's would never think of looking up here, even if chance did lead them along the gorge. They couldn't follow my trail if they tried to."

"Then, if we go down quickly, if we get your bag of food and put out the fire down there, and come right back up, it won't be very long before our tracks will be gone. Come; let's hurry."

"Coming," said Gratton. "Yes; we must hurry."

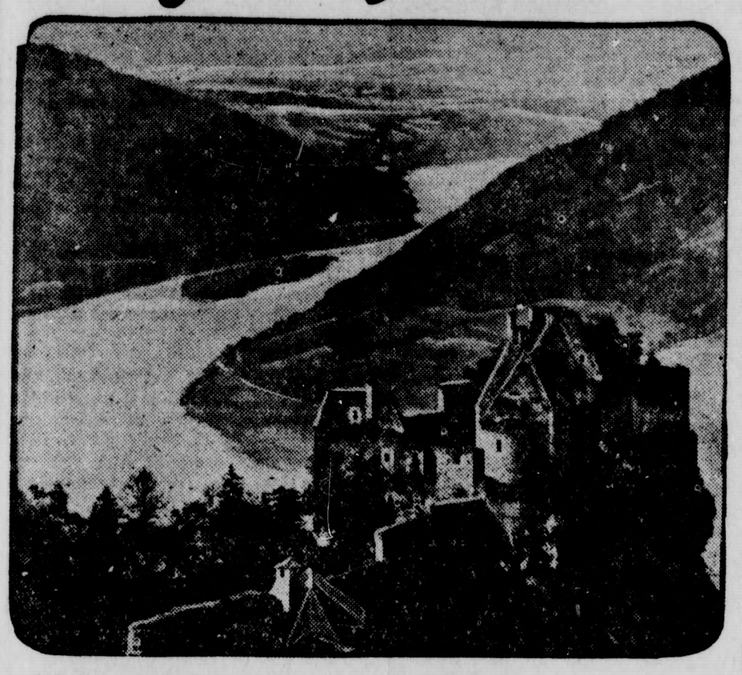
Highway of Races



Aggstein, a Robber Castle on the Danube.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE "Beautiful Blue Danube," which is not blue, but either muddy brown or green according to the rainfall in its valley, bids fair to increase in commercial prestige since the agreement at the recent Stresa conference between 15 European nations regarding certain economic and political policies.

For many years countries bordering the Danube have disagreed on tariffs and other regulations, thus stifling trade on the most imporant navigable stream in central Europe.

Flowing from the hills of Bavaria to the Black sea, the Danube has been called the highway of races because many races of both the Orient and Occident have navigated the stream and held parts of its 1,800-mile course.

As one travels from the Black sea, the maritime Danube is left behind at Turnu-Severin, at the head of its sprawling delta. There the Orient has been exchanged for the Occident—Moslem minarets for Greek-Orthodox domes, old Turkish gates for old Roman bridges. There a narrower Danube winds between blue, ever-lifting hills, the gateway to western Europe.

And there you may board one of the big river steamers that all summer long ascend or descend through half a dozen countries lying between the Black forest and Black sea. Hardly is Turnu-Severin astern when the traveler finds himself amid a wild swirl of waters, before whose terrific force his boat's progress more and more resembles the freak feat of trying to mount a descending escalator.

At last the shelter of an artificially walled channel is reached. Men call this two-mile stretch the Iron Gate, and doubtless the Argonautic heroes in their ascent gave it some equally forceful name, perhaps likening it to the battering club of Herakles.

For thousands of years the club battered, or if you prefer, the gates clanged, against craft that sneaked upshore, towed by battalions of men. At last, owing to the decisions of the Berlin Congress in 1878, the rapids of the lower Danube were regulated by Hungary at a cost of $9,000,000.

The Forgotten Island.

"There's Ada Kaleh," remarks a guide pointing to an islet off Orsova. "Folks call it the Forgotten island because the Berlin Congress overlooked it. Now, would you catch an island being overlooked in the Hudson? Why, there'd be an amusement park on it!"

Ashore the traveler glimpses a quaint island colony of Bosnian Moslems, who long ago built their little houses amid the encompassing ramifications of a dismantled Turkish fortress. It is as peaceful a sight as that of wild flowers carpeting an old shell crater.

On the Danube there are customs duties and enough local port regulations to make a sailorman go bald with worry. The river is more like a political conflict, with seven tickets in the field, which is to say, it flows through three kingdoms, one regency, two republics and a social democracy.

Its length is exceeded in Europe only by that of the Volga. Its navigable portion, as shown on the chart, totals nearly 1,600 miles; and a glance at its nine political sectors, of which three are joint—that is, shared by pairs of countries—reveal that almost one-third of the Danube's navigable length is thus shared by states which face each other from the river's opposite banks.

Presently the boat enters a sheer-faced gorge of sky-cutting profiles that incloses the observer in an endless vesta of rock-walled waters.

Through the Kazan Defile.

Silent as twilight, primitive as when the daedal Danube wrought this passage to the sea, the Kazan Defile might easily have seemed to the early Greeks a Charon-haunted Styx leading to the underworld. Their bards called the future Danube the Istros and dwelt in awesome terms on its "shadow-environed origin," thus placing its source at the head of the Kazan, where rapids still swirl malevolently over ledges of rock.

But the Greeks never permitted superstition to interfere with business. With sword in one hand and merchandise scales in the other, they unloaded textiles, pottery and arms on the aborigines in exchange for furs, hemp and slaves.

A sharp-eyed traveler may discover what appears to be some vandal's name scratched in capital letters on the sheer cliff-face of the defile and may be ready to compare it to "Otto Schwartz, Berlin," on the Pyramids, of "W. Brown, N. Y.," on a spire of Milan cathedral. But with marine glasses he will find that the scratchings read: "Imp. Caesar. . . . Trajanus Aug. Germ. Pont. Maximus." Trajan, or any other Roman who could lead an army along the flat face of those river-washed cliffs by means of beam-supported galleries, he will agree, had a perfect right to cut his name there!

For two days and nights the boat churns ahead between wide plains, and on the third afternoon comes into sight of Belgrade (Beograd). Perched high over the confluence of the Danube and the Sava, the Jugoslav capital presents a striking picture. Few European cities are situated on two such waterways, whose navigable lengths within Jugoslavia total 720 miles.

Budapest a Stately City.

Not to know Budapest is to have missed one of the loveliest of European cities. It has its own distinctive stateliness that reflects the cultural flowering of a race whose kingdom has been enthroned on the Danube for a thousand years. As certain American metropolitan quarters, such as "Little Italy" or "Little Germany," reflect their mother countries in miniature, so Budapest's topography reflects on a small scale the lineaments of what, as a result of the war, is literally "Little Hungary." Ancient Buda, on the Danube's right bank, rears aloft on rocky crests that represent the foothills of Hungary's mountains, while on the other bank modern Pest stretches away in levels that prelude Hungary's plains.

After leaving Budapest, the boat heads for that cliff-fringed section of the Danube where it makes the big turn westward. Ahead rise the Little Carpathians, forming the background of a busy port scene of quays, cranes, canal boats clustered in slips—Pressburg, the German guidebook calls it.

It commands a splendid panorama of the Danube's two arms encircling the Great Schutt, which local pride proclaims "the largest interior island in Europe."

To Vienna and Beyond.

Beyond Bratislava the river skirts Hainburg, a hillside picture of town walls, curious gates, crumbling towers. It is one of half a dozen Danube towns mentioned in the "Nibelungenlied" as being associated with the downstream journey of Burgundy's doomed knights.

Beyond Hainburg the Danube's banks lower into the wide plain where lies Vienna. Owing to postwar exigencies, Vienna has achieved for its working classes a housing scheme which, planned to embrace 30,000 families, is "futuristic" only because of its novelty.

A visit to one Viennese palace of many—the Schonbrunn of Versailles-like aspect—reveals the luxury of the Hapsburg regime and its postwar sic transit under Austria's democratic republic; for the park where Maria Theresa once strolled and where the Napoleon of 1805 planned campaigns has become a Sunday pleasance of Vienna's workers.

Beyond Vienna Greifenstein's fine old castle rises into view, as you near the Danube's region of medieval strongholds. Steaming past the Wachau Defile's crag-set ruins, one reflects upon the formidable amount of trade that fell to them as a result of the Crusades.

In 1096 some 2,000 craft, packed with 40,000 Palestine-bound troops, descended the Danube. Three ensuing Crusades took the same route. There sprang up a river trade consisting of westbound silks, bronzes, spices, oils, and of eastbound furs, arms, and saddlery. And the Danube castles took their tolls and the flotsam rake-off of stranded cargoes, not to mention piratical seizures and the enslaving of ships' crews.

Castle Aggstein, the most dreaded of Danubian robber strongholds, must have had a great turnover in riparian loot and captive maidens. And Castle Durnstein eclipsed all local records in the capture-and-ransom trade when its gates closed upon the royal prize, Richard Coeur de Lion.

Brian to the Rescue

By ALICE DUANE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

IT HAD been an unusually uneventful morning for Brian Kent, sitting at his perfectly appointed desk in one of his uncle's spacious offices.

Brian was getting into shape a report his uncle had asked him to have ready that afternoon.

Once or twice that morning he had been on the verge of interrupting this report business, finding an excuse to dictate a letter so that even for a short few minutes he could have had a reason to have his uncle's very charming young secretary sitting at the opposite side of his desk. But there was always a chance that his uncle might come in unexpectedly—and the report was urgent.

The steady dull drone of machinery was becoming almost unendurable—and then the low, throaty growl followed by the high deafening shriek of the fire alarm.

No special need for alarm, Brian quickly assured himself. After all, the factory people had probably been given specific instructions for orderly exit from the building in such an emergency.

The factory side of the building Brian knew was practically fire proof but this older section that housed the executive offices and the office staffs was of wooden construction. There was a sprinkler system and numerous fire exits, but even then things sometimes happen—

Brian quickly gathered up the papers strewn on his desk, crammed them into his coat pockets and dashed into the large bare room where the typists and stenographers had their desks. Most of the desks were already deserted. Girls were hurrying across the floor to an exit beyond. He called to some who lingered and told them to go without delay.

"Where is Miss Mason?" he called to one of them.

"She ran into the accounting department," the girl told him.

Brian muttered an oath to himself and dashed forward to the accounting department. Miss Mason was kneeling beside a small safe in one of the smaller offices.

In a fraction of a second he reached her, took the papers from her hands, threw them in the safe and without waiting to explain lifted her in his arms.

"What are you doing?" she asked, and then realizing that there was no alternative let her slender young body relax in his strong young arms.

"There is no terrible hurry," she told him, as he hurried down the hall. But Brian assured her that he was taking no chances. He would have carried her down the fire escape if she had not so seriously objected. Instead he went down the stairs ahead of her, turning back at every step to assure himself of her safe descent.

Alice Mason breathed a sigh of relief when she had reached the ground and realized that none of the girls had been looking on.

"They will all be over at the other side," she told Brian, who stood looking down at her in a friendly, possessive way.

"You had me worried for a minute," he said. "And don't you ever take time to put letters in the safe again."

"But that's orders from your uncle," Alice said. "There's always the chance that a letter might be valuable—so just as a matter of drill we always do it."

"Matter of drill!" Brian repeated blankly. "Always do it! What do you mean?"

"Just that every time we have a fire drill we are supposed to do precisely what we would if there was a real fire—"

Brian looked amazed and then laughed.

"The joke's on me," he told her. "But how did I know it was only a drill? No one told me."

"How did you happen to run across me?" Alice asked. "Weren't you going to leave the building?" She was trying not to laugh at him.

"Not until I'd found you," he said. "You see, that's the first thing I thought of when I heard that shrieking siren. I suppose I thought I was saving your life or something—anyway, I'm glad for your sake the other girls didn't see the rescue—" He looked a little crestfallen and foolish.

"I wouldn't have minded, if you hadn't," Alice told him. "I started to cry out at first, because I was so surprised. But—I didn't mind. I'd been hoping all morning you'd send for me to take some dictation—"

"And I'd been wishing I had a chance—"

A gong rang. Alice said it was the signal to return to the building. She wasn't laughing now. "I'm very grateful to you."

"Oh, pshaw," Brian told her, "I really made a mistake—and incidentally let you know, as you must know now, that I'm seriously interested."

"Couldn't we talk about that some other time?" Alice suggested. "That is—I've got to get back in line to go in with the other girls—" she was walking away from him now—"but I'm interested, too."

"Let's talk about it tonight at dinner," he called softly. "I'll call you in for dictation and we can make plans— So long, Alice—"

"So long, Brian. Thanks for the rescue. And next time there's to be a drill I'll let you know."

Someone connected with an Iowa newspaper probably found it expedient to hide out after the following paragraph appeared in an account of the Ladies' Aid Society meeting: "Following the musical program, Mrs. J. T. Miller read an article on 'Personal Devils.' Seventeen were present."

As One Neighbor to Another, We Ask You—

Suppose you had a store of natural wealth in property which rightfully belonged to you and your family, and

Suppose a giant came along and built a wall between you and the property containing thee store of natural wealth, and

Suppose this giant, laughing in your face, dared you or any of your family to climb that wall and take your share of the wealth rightfully belonging to you and your family,

Would you ask your neighbors to come to your aid and right the wrong that had been inflicted upon you? Of course you would, and in a darn big hurry at that!

The city of Huntington Beach finds itself in just such a predicament as that described above and now makes its neighborly appeal through Amendment No. 11, to be voted on at the election on November 8. The Standard Oil Company, through the unforseen inequitable operation of law, has entrenched itself in monopolistic control of a vast store of natural wealth rightfully belonging to the people of Huntington Beach and the state of California. It has despoiled a strip of beach front and will maintain its oil derricks in operation until the last barrel of oil is recovered from the vast store underground.

In the enjoyment of its monopolistic advantage, this company erects "No Trespass" signs and laughs at the efforts of the people of Huntington Beach to come into their own by drilling offset wells.

Again, on behalf of special privileges, paid advocates are attempting to set up false issues, and divert attention from the true situation. Amendment No. 11 affects only a small strip at Huntington Beach where this condition now exists.

California, perhaps as much as any other state, retains the pioneer spirit of neighborly appeal and aid. Huntington Beach is asking the voters of the state to do a neighborly act in the name of justice. They are asking their neighbors of the state to yote "Yes" on Amendment No. 11 and are content to hazard their future upon that appeal, knowing that the answer will be "YES ON ELEVEN."—Editorial from Huntington Beach News, October 13, 1932.

The legendary William Tell has a modern rival in "Slingshot Charlie," otherwise known as Charles Taylor of Reelfoot Lake, Tennessee. The youthful David who slew Goliath hardly exhibited greater skill.

BIG THEATRE PARTY BY J. U. H. S. PUPILS

The second annual Theatre Party for the benefit of the Jefferson Union high school will be held next Thursday evening, November 3, at the Daly City Theatre. An excellent vaudeville program has been arranged. The feature picture, "Tom Brown of Culver," will be the chief attraction. Several short reels of novelties will also be presented. Tickets are being sold by students, but may be obtained at the theatre also.

The freshman class is leading the school in the selling of Theatre Party tickets. The following are the number of tickets that are taken out:

Freshmen—Three hundred and forty-three.

Sophomores—One hundred and tweny-three.

Juniors—Two hundred and forty-three.

Seniors—Two hundred.

Principal James Ferguson addressed the Bay Shore P. T. A. at Visitacion Valley last Friday evening. The occasion was Fathers' Night, and Mr. Ferguson spoke particularly to the fathers regarding the need of their co-operation in the rearing of their boys. In over 90 per cent of the cases in which boys get into trouble it is found that there is no co-operation between the parents in creating a good home environment, he said. A boy's chief need is a sympathetic approach to his problems by his father. In too many cases a gulf exists between fathers and sons, resulting finally in mistakes that often result in tragedy. Mr. Ferguson contradicted the common talk regarding the moral delinquency of the present rising generation, and added that no generation of boys and girls has ever had to meet such temptations. "These have been put in their way by the adults who compose our democracy," he said. In referring to our present social and economic problems, he said they were not created by the rising generation, but that we, adults, are ushering out in life our boys and girls to solve these problems we have created. He referred particularly to the payment of our national debts, war, etc., and to the unemployment problems, due in large part, he said, to the machine age which has developed in our economic life. "If we do not give our boys and girls the opportunity to get the necessary education to deal constructively with these problems, then the future holds no hope for democracy and our present social order," he said. Mr. Ferguson quoted President Theodore Roosevelt as saying that the public schools of America are our greatest hope, and urged the fathers to get in closer contact with the work of the schools, with the teachers and trustees, in the interest not only of the children but of our general social and economic welfare.

A large delegation from Jefferson Union High School P. T. A. attended the meeting.

Mr. Ferguson also addressed the Brisbane P. T. A. on Thursday evening. Judge Franklin Swart was also one of the speakers. The occasion was Fathers' Night there also.

About forty members attended the Jefferson Parent-Teachers' Association monthly meeting held last Tuesday night in the high school auditorium.

A short business meeting preceded the entertainment. Vice-president, Mr. Arthur Quirmbach, presided at the meeting. Due to the absence of Secretary Clive M. Saiz, Mr. Gray read the minutes of the previous meeting.

The first number on the program was a short play entitled, "He Got the Job," given by eight boys of the high freshmen class, namely, Tom Bergin, Edwin Davies, Norbert Salsman, Louis Schenone, Robert Morrehouse, Dan O'Brien, Wesley Fulton, and Kurt Scheel. This was followed by two numbers played by the high school orchestra. A group of girls composed of May Swan, Evelyn Clark, Thora Anderson, Elizabeth Abbott, Vivian Felch, and Peggy Vincent, next sang two selections accompanied on the piano by Alois Lang.

After the entertainment, refreshments were served in the Senior Room.

Playing in their last grid game of the season, the fighting Jefferson Indians will clash with Bellermine Prep school of San Jose on the local tamrac, Saturday. Activities will start at 3 P. M.

In addition to being the final tussle on the Jefferson football calendar, the contest is a crucial game for the members of the local eleven as they must win this battle in order to receive their blocks.

Despite the fact that Bellermine is rated high in gridiron circles, the coming tilt is believed to be a toss-up. Last Saturday, the prepsters dropped a 7-0 decision to St. Mary's prep school.

Due to the fact that Jefferson has had many doctor bills this season incurred by injuries, the contest will be a benefit game. Admission will be 25 cents without student body cards and 15 cents with. F. W. Schmidt, local printer, has been kind enough to donate the tickets for the game. These will be sold in the hall, Friday.

Marian Mansfelt was elected president and Mary Kahle secertary at the first meeting of the Executive Committee of the Affiliated Science Clubs on Tuesday, October 18.

After the election there was a discussion of the meeting of all the sections of the Science Club. The date and the entertainment of this general meeting is to be decided by the different sections.

A hike was also discussed but the date was not set.

Friday, the Physics section of the Science Club visited the Ford Proving Ground and saw a special display chassis of the new Ford V8. Explanations of the several new motor innovations were given by a sales manager.

Combining a fast-breaking offense with consistent shooting, the Jefferson 130 pound hoop team effectively trounced the Gael Athletic Club, Friday, at the Portola Gym. The score was 22-10.

Throughout the tussle, the floor-play of the Indian quintet was the main attraction. The local hoopsteers were brilliant in this department of play, as displayed by the fact that but one field goal was tallied by the Indians from a distance outside the foul-line.

Walter Shaw, flashy forward, was the high point man of the tilt, scoring 8 points. Howard Capps, who captains the team, was next in line, having 6 digits to his credit. Eddie Diehl and James Martin followed, with 4 points behind their names.

Hopeful that beer will become a legitimate article of commerce in the near future, the United States Brewers' Academy in New York has re-opened with a class of 30 pupils. The institution was established fifty years ago by Anton Schwartz, a famous Austrian chemist, and before the advent of national prohibition was suported by many leading brewers, including Pabst, Busch, Ehret, Doelger and others. The course offered is for professionals only, and not for amateur home brewers.

It should be gratifying to intelligent Americans that Albert Einstein, "overshadowing genius of his age," will shortly come to the faculty of Princeton University as a resident member of its Institute for Advanced Study. A New York newspaper wonders whether we can keep him here unless a way may be found to supply him with the good German beer to which he is accustomed.

ORGANIZED LABOR OPPOSES STATE PROPOSITION NO. 3

Organized labor and employers, architects, realtors and building contractors, as well as representatives of general business have united in opposition to State Proposition Number 3, and are confident that it will be beaten in November.

To a long list of endorsements in all parts of California have just been added the California State Chamber of Commerce, California Building Congress, and the Down Town Association of San Francisco.

There is a widespread feeling that if Number 3 should pass and the trust deed should be abolished, damage that could not be repaired for many years would be done to the general interests of our state. Property values would be automatically depreciated. Financing of homes and farms would be extremely difficult. Building would be retarded and unemployment would increase. For this reason lenders and borrowers are united in the fight against Number 3, known as "the Lawyers' Bill" because it was initiated by a small unofficial group of attorneys in the city of Los Angeles.

Recounting the feats of women aviators, a recent writer reminds us that the first woman airplane pilot in the world was Harriet Quimby, who obtained her license in 1912. She was killed in a crash during a flying exhibition in Boston.

'HAVE FAITH IN GOD' IS SERMON TOPIC

Mrs. J. Montgomery will be the soloist in Grace Presbyterian church on Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour, when the pastor will preach on the theme, "Have Faith in God." The Sunday School, which now commences at 9:55 A. M. and closes at 10:55 A. M., is growing in attendance and a goal of 250 has been set. In the evening a service of Gospel songs is carried on at 7:45, and the singing of old time hymns is enjoyed by all. The church is located at Hanover and Evergreen.

Permanent preservation of documents will be made possible by a new process for treating paper, according to Dr. Broadman of New York, its inventor. Maybe this will enable some folks to preserve certain stocks and bonds until they are worth something.

Of the 18,000 bills that were introduceed during the recent session of the United States Congress, only 500 were enacted into law.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 5 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1932 NUMBER 14

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Postman: "Being a postman has its advantages, but you don't know how it wears out your shoes."

Lady: "I can quite believe it. And especially when you have to bring those letters from abroad."

Magician: "I can read minds."

Engineer: "You can? Can you read mine?"

Magician: "Certainly."

Engineer: "Then why don't you hit me?"

"ABERDEEN," the Coal that satisfies.

Getting the most out of the customer by giving him the most is the secret of business success.

Home is a place where a man can do as he chooses, provided what he chooses is agrreable with what his wife wants done.

Teacher: "How old would a person be who was born in 1890?"

Bright Pupil: "Man or woman?"

Buffets — Kitchen Cases made to order.

Guest: "Delightful party you're having tonight, old man. I understand it is for your wife."

Host: "Yes, it is the twelfth anniversary of her thirtieth birthday."

Paints, Oils and Varnishes—the best.

Behind in his alimony payment, Roy Swanson, of Chicago, offered to give his wife a cemetery lot in lieu of money.

"My son writes that he is in a tight place."

"And what's the trouble?"

"He's a waiter in Scotland."

Smiling is an art—not difficult to master, and soon becomes a habit.

The house had been rapidly built and occupied.

"Do you find the place comfortable and substantially built?" asked the landlord.

"Well," said the tenant, "I always go outside to sneeze."

If you want what you cannot gain, learn to desire what you may obtain.
